Festive Chinese.

I was a bitter cold rainy night when we set out from the hotel in search of the flower boats of Canton, writes the London Telegraph's correspondent. This was a new experience. I have before now been half frozen in a gondola at Venice in the winter, but I never expected to be frostbitten within a few degrees of the equator. Up streets and down streets of boats we paddled, un-til at last we were landed in a dark corner and hauled up upon ice-covered slippery planks, which nearly collapsed under one of the party, who was with-in an inch of the dark and dreadful

A more unlikely place for a festival could not be imagined. No Thames site below Bridge inhabited by any amount of Quilps could have ed more forlorn; but Susan and Ah Cum guided us to a distant boat-house, from which came sounds of noise, from which came sounds of mirth and revelry.

I could scarcely believe my eyes. A door was opened, and I beheld the most luxuriously furnished palace conceivable, bright with electric light, covered to the control of the con ered with mirrors and tapestry, and presenting a scene such as the stage has never offered. Man-darins, young and old, in their costliest robes of blue silk and plain colored satin, folled idly on the rich chairs and cozy divans. Some were drowsy with opium fumes, some enjoyed a whiff or so from a scented tobacco pipe handed at intervals by a painted girl or an obsequious attendant. At the end of the room a splendid feast was spread, as yet untasted. A company of singing damsels. all with chalked and painted faces, droned in a corner a drowsy chant to the twang of a guitar. Hearing that a party of Englishmen had arrived who were desirous of seeing the interior of a Chinese flow-erboat, the wealthy mandarin who was giving the feast courteously invited us inside, and we were at once treated as

Our host talked excellent English, and be described the eastern delights of these floating palaces. Tea was of-fered to us out of the most costly porcelain cups. Fruits and sweets were handed round, and then over rose-water pipes and scented tobacco we were told how rich Chinamen enjoy themselves in the watches of the Door and Window frames, mould start from the watches of the Door and Window frames, mould start from the watches of the Door and window frames, mould start from the watches of the Door and window frames, mould start from the watches of the Door and window frames, mould start from the watches of the Door and window frames. night. Very rarely they have flower-boats of their own. They are hired for he night or the week from some "comprador" or agent, who provides the boat, the feast and the fittings, down to the singing girls and their companions with the cternal grin, the black rolled and grease encumbered hair, and the chalked face.

Tastes differ in the matter of beauty but, after the everlasting black hair stuck all ever with pins and flowers, massed with pomatum an inch thick, the sight of a chestnut or bloude English female head would be a positive re-

Peeping into a hairdresser's shop the other day, I found that the Chinese or Jacobse and the content of the property of the content of panese black hair is built up on cushions in the most elaborate fashion, so elab-orate, indeed, that I imagine the edifice is seldom taken down, certainly not for many days. But the custom is not dis-tasteful to the mandarins of old Canton, who can afford a party on a flower boat anchored in a creek in winter, and in summer sailing away with its feasts and guests to the upper reaches of the mighty river.

> A TALE OF BURIED TRASURE,-Nearly every island along the Texas coast has its tradition of treasure buried by pirates. Padre Island is no exception, and for several weeks a party headed by Henry Shannon, a merchant of Quintala, and Charles Newman, const trader, have been making excavations on the island, guided by an old chart, which they say they found recently. Saturday they dug up several old gold coins and medals at a place indicated on the chart, and are now certain that immense treasure is within their place in the chart, and are now certain that immense treasure is within their The coins are dated from 1690 to grisp. The coins are dated from 1690 to 1780, but the finders keep the extent and value of the find a secret. This discovery re-calls the fact that an old shepherd on the calls the fact that an old shepherd on the island, eighteen or twenty years ago, found several hundred dollars in gold coins there and took them to a village on the Rio Grande, where he was robbed and mortally wounded by bandits. When found he said he had left a wagon load of gold and silver upon the island, and he was in search of a wagon to remove it when waylaid. A search was made for the treasure then, but none was found.
